

Tiny Ecology

Rosa Mills

Monday, October 31st • 6:55 PM

Day 1

"The only things interrupting the stillness were the cars passing by in the background and the people chattering as they walked past. Otherwise, it was a beautifully serene and tranquil experience."

Day 2

"It felt warm outside due to the high humidity, but there was a slight breeze that came through about once every minute or so that made it feel comfortably cool."

Friday, November 4th • 9:08 PM

Monday, November 7th • 4:25 PM

Day 3

"The breeze had the leaves of the tree and the moss that is hanging from the branches of the tree moving with more intensity than usual."

Day 4

"The sky was completely covered by clouds, not a single ray of sunlight nor a single spot of blue broke through... The blades of grass at the foot of the tree were being pulled forcibly in the direction of the wind."

Wednesday, November 9th • 3:28 PM

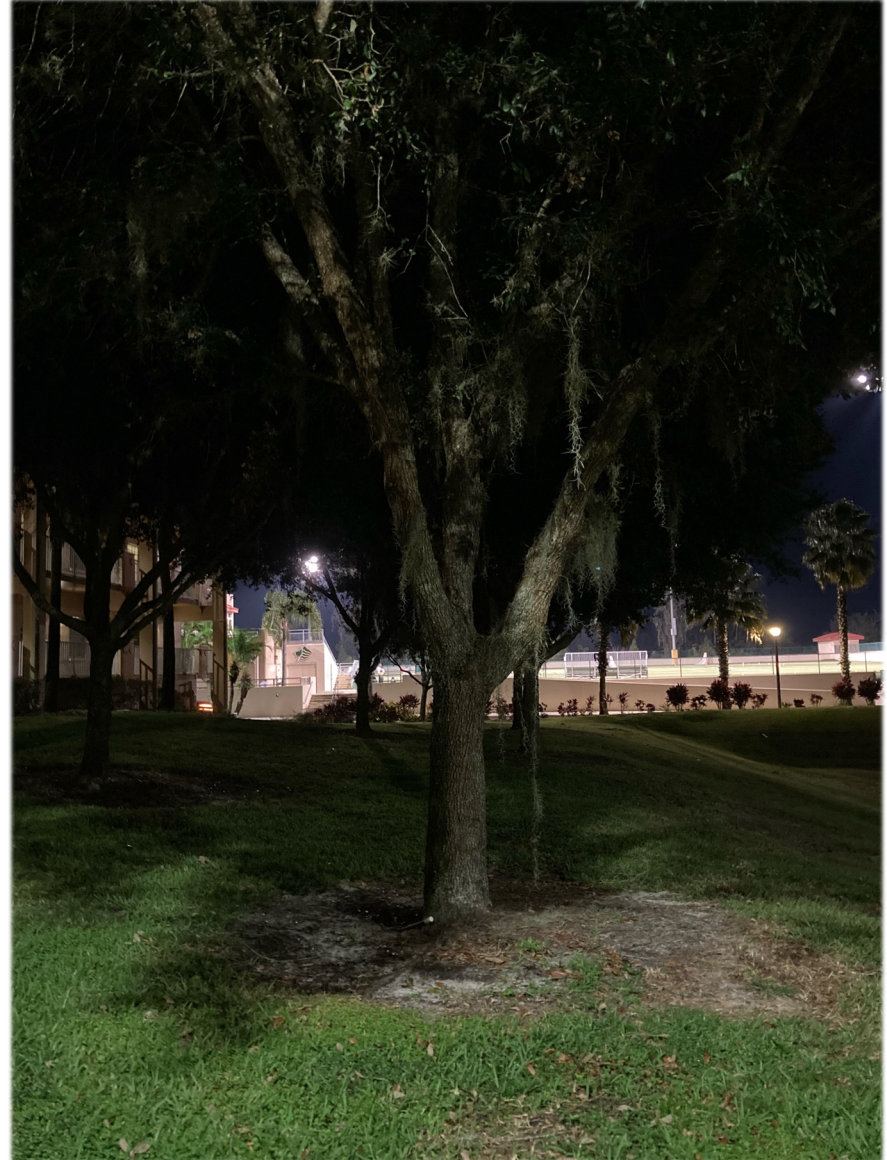

Friday, November 11th • 11:49 AM

Day 5

"There were a few little birdies hopping around from branch to branch and flying between the different trees in the area. They also chirped back and forth with each other here and there."

Day 6

"There was hardly any movement in regard to the tree. A moth would fly by here and there, and I noticed one leaf fall from a branch. The moss was barely swaying back and forth."

Monday, November 14th • 7:02 PM

Friday, November 18th • 8:20 AM

Day 7

"It was a little darker outside than usual because of the clouds that covered the sky like a layer of stretched-out cotton balls. The rustling of branches drew my attention to little birdies flying around the tree and hopping from branch to branch."

Day 8

"I saw something move out of the corner of my eye—a lizard! ... It was hanging out in a little spot of grass by the tree, then ended up moving to a spot where I could not see it anymore."

Monday, November 28th • 1:08 PM

Changes

Suggestions
