

This week I made a rehearsal plan in hopes that it would help me to be more definitive about the things that I know I want to do a certain way, and to help me be a little more directional with my leadership. I think it did indeed work out for me. I was able to voice my thoughts better and get things moving in the direction I wanted them to quicker. And it seemed like it was reassuring for the others that I knew what I wanted from them and told them what I wanted them to do, instead of waiting for trial and error. I will definitely keep making these rehearsal plans in future weeks.
